LET THE RECORD SPEAK FOR ITSELF

God said, "Let there be light"; and there was light" (Gen. 1:3). Subsequently, He "separated the light from the darkness" (vs. 4). Morning followed evening and there was one day (vs. 5). Even though the sun, moon, and stars were not spoken into existence until the fourth day, each day of creation is described in precisely the same manner (vss. 14-19).

God's ability to do all things is confirmed by the fact that He spoke the universe into existence. The psalmist offers praise, saying, "By the word of the Lord the heavens were made, and by the breath of His mouth all their host....For He spoke, and it was done; He commanded, and it stood fast" (Ps. 33:6, 9).

The same inspired writer who provided the Genesis record, also recorded the Ten Commandments. Moses illustrated the fourth commandment of Sabbath-day observance by directing attention to God's rest on the seventh day. He said, "For in six days the LORD made heaven and earth, the sea, and all that is in them, and rested on the seventh day. Therefore the LORD blessed the Sabbath day and made it holy" (Exodus 20:11, ESV). The long-practiced principle of Sabbath-day observance among the Israelites was based on six days of work followed by a day of rest.

There is no reason, whatsoever, to manipulate the biblical text in such a manner as to facilitate vast geological ages into the six days of creation. Attempts to do so have nothing to do with an objective exegesis of the text; but everything to do with incorporating the theory of evolution into the Bible. We know God's power: "He spoke and it was done." We know God's timing: "In six days the Lord made heaven and earth, the sea, and all that is in them." Now, what we need to do is let the record speak for itself!
