A Glimpse into the Future (3)

Previously, we have stated that those who falsely predict future events ought to be labeled as false prophets (Dt. 18:21-22) and that those who advise going after other gods ought to be similarly rejected even if what they predict actually does come about (Dt. 13:1-3). Our ability to get a glimpse into the future is limited by divine revelation. Moses summed up the matter, saying, "The secret things belong to the Lord our God, but the things revealed belong to us and to our sons forever, that we may observe all the words of this law" (Dt. 29:29).

Many of the predictive prophecies found in God's revelation have already been fulfilled – His judgments against ungodly nations, including Israel and Judah – His predictions about the well-being or demise of specific individuals such as Abraham – even His predictions about the Messiah, in large measure, have been fulfilled.

But, there are many yet-to-be-fulfilled promises in the Bible – many of which are shrouded in mystery and confusion as a result of attempts to squeeze ancient prophecies into the time table of present-day human events. From the beginning, well-meaning Christians have struggled with or been deceived about matters related to the coming of the Lord. The Christians at Thessalonica had been shaken from their composure by those who said the day of the Lord had already come (1 Th. 2:2). In order to correct their misunderstanding, Paul reminded them of previously prophesied events which had not yet taken place (vss. 3-5).

Some 14 or 15 years later, when Peter wrote his second epistle, he spoke of a time when mockers would arise, saying, "Where is the promise of His coming? For...all continues just as it was from the beginning of creation" (2 Pet. 3:4). After exposing their false premise by mentioning the Flood, Peter provides a powerful preview of what will happen on "the day of the Lord" (2 Pet. 3:10). As to the timing of the Lord's return, Jesus says, "But of that day and hour no one knows, not even the angels of heaven, nor the Son, but the Father alone" (Mt. 24:36). There are some things we can know about the Lord's return; but its timing is not one of them. As much as anything, this fact encourages earnest and continual preparation.
